

Image credit: Clarke DeLisle.

This is a picture of a river in a highly tectonically active landscape in southern Taiwan. Not really any volcanoes, just “rock uplift.” The mountains are getting taller!

Can you see any similarities between this river and the miniature ones in our stream table demonstrations?